Simpsons Fans Can't Beat Bongo

Earlier this year, Simpsons Comics and Stories #1 was released to an incredibly positive fan response reminiscent of the reaction to Marvel's Ren & Stimpy #1 when that series made the jump from animation to comics in '92. Well, that overwhelmingly positive response was so enthusiastic that Simpsons creator Matt Groening was motivated to do just what his millions of fans had hoped: he decided the time was ripe for Simpsons comics. Plural. Which is why, beginning this fall, the Simpsons and Groening's Simpson-related creations will appear in four different ongoing titles.

The debut begins in November with the release of The Simpsons #1 and Itchy & Scratchy Comics #1. The Simpsons will feature original stories of the animated family that has become America's dysfunctional sweethearts, while Itchy & Scratchy features the brutal exploits of the cat and mouse so familiar to Simpsons fans. Each $2.25 comic features a jumbo pullout centerspread poster; put 'em with the two posters included in the December-release Bongo titles and they form the deluxe Ultra-Jumbo Bongo Universe Mural.

December brings two new Simpsons titles, Bartman #1 and Radioactive Man #1. Bartman continues to poke fun at superhero comics and comic book collectors in the zany Groening manner, while Radioactive Man #1 is a sort of comic-within-a-comic... except that it exists totally on its own. As Simpsons viewers know, Radioactive Man is Bart Simpson's favorite comic book hero; this series features the comic book stories that Bart Simpson has so avidly pursued to complete his own collection, done in an offbeat 1950's Simpsons-Universe style. Bartman #1 features a silver foil-enhanced cover, while Radioactive Man #1 features, appropriately enough, glow-in-the-dark enhancements (done with florescent ink, not radium enhancements, of course); each book is priced at $2.95, and each includes another segment of the Jumbo Bongo Universe Mural.

While the four new titles aren't entirely written and drawn by Groening, he is involved in the creation of each title and supervises each book to make sure that it remains true to the Simpsons concepts and style. And these aren't just one-shots—all four Simpsons books will continue in '94... and be warned that Bongo has plans for other Simpsons surprises as well!...

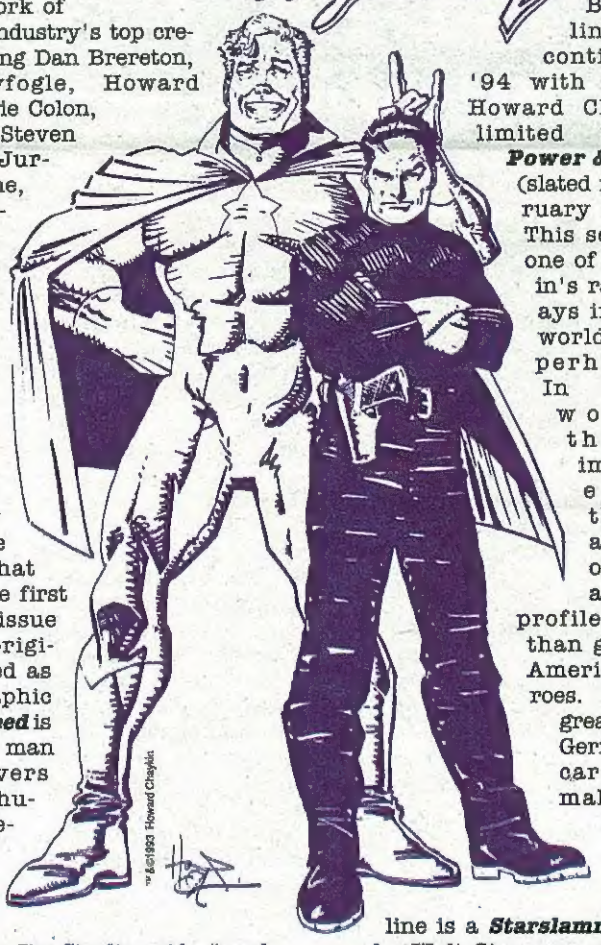
Malibu Acts With Bravura

Most publishers are happy to find one niche for themselves—but not Malibu. The company has already established two successful superhero universes in its Malibu Genesis and Malibu Ultraverse lines; an assortment of popular anime-inspired titles in its Eternity line; and a new line of rock comics under the Rock-It imprint. In early '94, Malibu ventures into new territory with the debut of Bravura Comics, a line of creator-owned books featuring the work of some of the industry's top creators, including Dan Brereton, Norm Breyfogle, Howard Chaykin, Ernie Colon, Peter David, Steven Grant, Dan Jurgens, Gil Kane, Shawn McManus Walter Simonson, Jim Starlin, and Marv Wolfman.



Bravura begins in January with Jim Starlin's 'Breed, a new six-issue miniseries that is actually the first of three six-issue miniseries originally designed as a line of graphic novels. "*'Breed is the story of a man who discovers he's half-human, half-demon, and how he deals with his heritage," creator Jim Starlin said. "working in this horror-adventure genre allows me t explore some rather disturbing territory I've never ventured into."

"Starlin has a tremendous track record of best-selling titles that have made him a fan-favorite," Malibu's Tom Mason said. "With a creator like Starlin, fans can expect great art and strong stories." The Bravura line will continue in '94 with a new Howard Chaykin limited series, Power & Glory (slated for February debut). This series is one of Chaykin's rare forays into the world of superheroes. In this world, though, image is everything—and no one has a higher-profile image than good ol' American heroes. "The Japanese are great with stereos, the Germans are hot with cars, but nobody makes a superhero like the USA," Chaykin said.

Also upcoming in the Bravura line is a Starslammers limited series by Walt Simonson; and the return of Jim Starlin's Dreadstar, written by Peter David and illustrated by Ernie Colon.

"These are creator-owned comics the way they should always be done," Malibu creative director Tom Mason said. "We're fortunate to have some of the industry's top talent returning to what they do best—letting their imaginations run wild in a way that's sure to please both creator and audience."

Entity Unleashes a Megaton Christmas Blast

Vanguard, the hero who'll soon gain his own series from Image Comics, is also appearing in Megaton Christmas Special #1, a December release from Entity Comics. Megaton was Gary Carlson's short-lived comic from the mid-80's that featured the first published work of Rob Liefeld, Erik Larsen, Angel Medina, and others. "It's a joy to see this never-before-seen book finally printed in full color the way it deserves to be," Carlson said. "I think fans both old and new will be excited about what we are doing. Ma ny collectors have been seeking the earlier issues because they featured the first appearances of The Savage Dragon, Vanguard, and Youngblood. We have several of those characters on hand for this book"

Megaton Christmas Special #1 will feature a foil stamped cover illustrated by S.Clarke Hawbaker and a special introduction by Image's Rob Liefeld, who also contributes a rare vintage-1987 Youngblood centerspread. Gary Carlson and Steve Adams contribute a Vanguard holiday story; the book also includes a Megaton/Ultragirl story by Gary Carlson, Ron Fortier, and Frank Fosco; Doctor Weird by Ed deGeorge and Angel Medina; Feral by Ken Meyer, Jr., and a special bit of holiday humor by Fred Hembeck. The book will also include a Megaton cover gallery, re-presenting art by Larsen, Hawbaker, Medina, Pollard, Guice, and others; Kelley Jones contributes a Megaton trading card that will be polybagged with each issue. Megaton Christmas Special #1, a $2.95 comic, is scheduled for December release.

Batman's Very Animated In New Trade Paperback

Batman Adventures, the comic book series inspired by Batman: The Animated Series on Fox, has been so popular that the early issues aren't easy to find. For fans who'd like the opportunity to enjoy these early stories (which aren't adaptations of television episodes, but are instead original stories produced in the style of the cartoon series), DC is offering Batman: The Collected Adventures, a budget-priced $5.95 trade paperback collecting the first six issues of Batman Adventures, and adding a new wraparound painted cover by Ty Templeton and an introduction by Batman: The Animated Series writer Paul Dini. Batman: The Collected Adventures is slated for November 4th release.

It's All There In White and Black

Daredevil #319, the prequel to the six-part "Fall From Grace" storyline by Dan Chichester and Scott McDaniel, was such a quick sellout that many fans can't locate a copy at any price. Well, Marvel hates for you to go away unhappy, so they're reprinting the book on November 4th; the reprint will be easily distinguishable from the original edition, since the cover colors will be reversed: what was black on the first printing is now white, and what was white on the first printing is now black. This reprint will ship at the same time as the penultimate chapter of the storyline, which pits Daredevil against his evil doppelganger and paves the way for the reintroduction of Elektra.

SkyBox Heads For Deep Space

SkyBox, producers of (among others) Star Trek and Star Trek Masterpieces Trading Cards, has announced the upcoming release of their first Star Trek: Deep Space Nine Trading Card Series. SkyBox initially offered a small Deep Space Nine prototype set this past spring; the response was so overwhelmingly strong that the full 100-card series is coming in November. "The cards feature the characters, spacescapes, and spaceships from the suspenseful first season of Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, along with a special ten-card subset of technical cards providing detailed, inside information about the Deep Space Nine space station and the tools, weapons, and materials used by the crew," George White of SkyBox said. "The cards will be produced with a video digital transfer process, yielding the sharpest visuals. Randomly inserted in packs are five foreign language cards, four Spectra bonus cards featuring space scenes and one limited bonus gold Spectra Collection card."

Skybox's Star Trek: Deep Space Nine Trading Card Series should reach comic shops in late November; each eight-card pack is priced at $1.25.

An International Anthem

Currently, most comics produced for US readers are published by United States companies—but a new Canadian company, Anthem Publications, is ready to enter the comics field in a big way in 1994.

"Anthem is currently putting together a line of high quality comic books featuring a group of extremely talented Canadian writers and artists," said Gary Ainsworth, director of the Maxxon Group, the parent company of Anthem Publications. "We are using only the highest quality glossy coated paper stock and are utilizing the spectacular coloring process of Digital Chameleon in Winnipeg."

Anthem's first release, The Bruiser, is scheduled for January '94 release. The focal event of the series is a product-tampering case that has had serious effects on its many victims; some suffered immediate, severe side effects such as sterility, while others who seemed initially unaffected but later began to develop strange powers. The Bruiser's powers are adrenaline-based great strength and rapid healing; he must be careful not to get too angry or excited, though, for once the adrenaline is released into his system, he must find a physical release or he will suffer intense pain. The series focuses on his superhero guise and his problematic personal life as well. The Bruiser is created and written by Angelo Furlan and illustrated by Rob Drew and John Sagness.

The Andromeda Weapon, Anthem's second title, is a superteam book that focuses on a scientifically-created team of superhumans formed to defend their planet. "As with all of our books, this title will be character-driven and explore the feelings, motivations, and relationships of the characters involved while balancing that with the right amount of battle/action scenes to hold our younger readers," Ainsworth said. The Andromeda Weapon is written by Gary Timleck and illustrated by George Vila.

Anthem will continue to add new titles during 1994. "Our books will match or exceed the quality of any title on the market today," Ainsworth said.

No Job, No Diploma, No Limits Nova

You'd assume that someone with incredible powers like Nova's would have an upbeat outlook on life, wouldn't you? Look at it from Nova's viewpoint, though: he doesn't have a high school diploma, he doesn't have any sort of a career upon which he can build a normal life, and he has amazing powers... but they've changed so that he isn't sure what they are or exactly how to fully use them. He'd better figure them out pretty quickly, though, because the Shi'Ar Gladiator is coming his way, and Nova's going to need all the power he can muster to stand up to him!... Nova #1, the 48-page premiere issue of a new ongoing series, is written by Fabian Nicieza and illustrated by Chris Marrinan and Mark Stegbauer. The premiere issue will be released in two formats: a gold foil cover edition priced at $2.95 and a standard-cover version of the same book priced at $2.25. Whichever edition you choose, look for it on November 11th.

Mermaid Forest Makes Zero Hour Approaches For Evil Ernie

Evil Ernie: The Resurrection, the miniseries in which Ernie terrorizes Washington (as if Congress wasn't terror enough!), is rapidly coming to an end—but that doesn't mean that you're going to have to do without more Ernie adventures for many months. In December, Chaos Comics has a new Evil Ernie book on line—Evil Ernie #0, featuring "New Year's Evil," a story that takes Ernie's evil to the Big Apple during the holiday season. Evil Ernie #0 features a cover by Greg Capullo and interior artwork by Joel Thomas and Mark Morales. Writer/creator Brian Pulido is very enthusiastic about Thomas's artwork, saying, "Joel's pencils were a hit at San Diego ComicCon. Hardcore Evil Ernie fans loved his outrageous Bisley meets Sam Kieth style." Evil Ernie #0, a $2.50 comic, is scheduled for mid-December release.

Ringing In a New Era

For years now, Green Lantern has been forced to deal with two limitations of his incredible ring-derived power: first, the ring had to be recharged every twenty-four hours; and second, the ring didn't work on anything yellow. When a schism separates the Guardians into two dissenting camps, a new group takes charge of the Green Lanterns—and their first action is to eliminate both of these limitations, making the Green Lanterns more powerful than ever. Naturally, Hal Jordan is quite pleased with this change.. but the Guardians' second change is a little less pleasing. They decide that the Green Lanterns need a new leader... and their choice is Sinestro! Jones, Haynes, and Tanghal introduce the new era in Green Lantern #49, a November 25th release that leads into the gala fiftieth issue, which DC describes as "a major turning point in the series."

Unlikely Heroes Join Forces Again

When the average person thinks of a hero, neither a turtle nor a carrot immediately leap to mind. However, both the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and the Flaming Carrot have proven on their own that heroes come in surprising forms... and in November, these unlikely heroes will come together once again (they first met in Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #s 27-28) in TMNT/Flaming Carrot Crossover: Land of Green Fire.

"Land of Green Fire," a four-issue story arc, takes the Turtles, the Carrot, and the Mysterymen to South America, where a top-secret government project has gone awry. The Turtles arrive only to be confronted by hostile flame-creatures... so it's no surprise that, when they see the flame-topped Flaming Carrot, they'd assume that he might be another enemy. Before too long, though, the heroes recognize one another and join forces with to battle the flame creatures and to thwart an invasion from the sun (?!).

"Land of Green Fire" is written by Flaming Carrot creator Bob Burden; parts one and two of the four-issue full-color series are illustrated by Jim Lawson, while parts three and four are illustrated by Neil Vokes. TMNT/Flaming Carrot Crossover: Land of Green Fire #1, a $2.75 comic, is scheduled for November release.

Pandemonium Breaks Out

The Scarlet Witch, a new four-issue limited series by Dan Abnett, Andy Lanning, John Higgins, and Mark McKenna, takes the wonderful witch out of the Avengers and into her own magical adventure. When the Scarlet Witch wants advice concerning a demonic attack against the Avengers West Coast compound, it's only natural that she should turn to an expert in the mystical arts. Since Dr. Strange is busy with the Secret Defenders and the Siege of Darkness, she goes to Agatha Harkness for advice... but what she gets is far different than what she had hoped for. A series of bizarre supernatural occurrences make the Scarlet Witch all too aware that things are not what they seem—but even she is surprised when she learns that Agatha is really the murderous Master Pandemonium! Scarlet Witch #1, a $1.75 comic, is scheduled for November 4th release.

New Team Highlights Dark Dominion

Dark Dominion, the new title from Defiant Comics, has some new creators. Len Wein, whose credits include X-Men and Swamp Thing, will write the new series, while newcomer Joe James will handle the penciling honors; Joe has previously done some penciling and inking work for Milestone. Joe James and Steve Leialoha will continue as the illustrators for the series after the premiere issue, replacing the previously-announced Joe Phillips. Steve Ditko, initially announced as the artist of the series, will be working on the Dark Dominion #0 Trading Card Set only. Dark Dominion #1, a $2.50 comic, should be showing up on the comic shop racks at about the time you read this.

Here's the Buzz About Green Hornet

Now Comics reports that there are some big changes in store for the Green Hornet. The event begins in Green Hornet #29, the fist part of a two-issue story arc. The Green Hornet and Kato launch a hunt for the leader of a gun-smuggling ring that has been selling weapons to children; things go horribly wrong, though, and the Green Hornet is captured by one of his most diabolical enemies... and the outcome could scar him for life. The next storyline presents a Green Hornet who is rapidly losing control of his own faculties as he tries to protect his family.

According to Tony Caputo of Now, "Now has planned for a long line of gripping Hornet stories in the future, and the action won't stop. Upcoming issues will reveal the Hornet struggling with his emotional scars, which at times expose his darker nature. The lighter side of the Hornet will not be forgotten, however, as the future holds a love interest for Paul Reid. Some changes are in store for Kato as well, as his romance with Diana Reid heats up..." The change begins in Green Hornet #29, a $1.95 comic slated for late November release.

Waves at Viz

Mermaid Forest, the macabre Rumiko Takahashi series that has been serialized in Animerica Magazine from Viz, will graduate to its own four-issue limited series this December. Mermaid Forest follows Yuta and Mana, companions who have gained immortality from partaking of the mermaid's flesh... but they've discovered over the millennia that immortality isn't always good. Disillusioned by their inability to live a normal life, the duo gradually learn that their gift is also their curse. Mermaid Forest #1, a 32-page $2.75 comic, is scheduled for December 9th release.
